On appeal from a Judgment of the

ABRAHAM SOLOMON, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

He was duly assigned by this Court to prosecute the appeal herein.

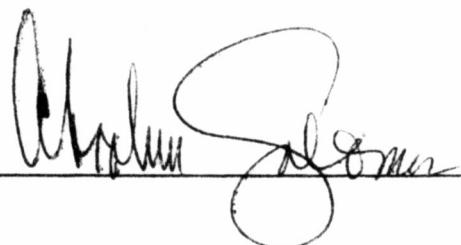

He was also trial counsel in the United States District Court of New York by assignment.

He makes this affidavit in support of the conclusion arrived at, based on a complete and thorough analysis of the testimony adduced at the trial; of the charge by the Court and all of the exhibits offered as evidence herein; also the law applicable to the said charges.

The record does not present any non-frivolous issue or issues. There were two (2) counts- Count 1 charged that the defendant did falsely make, alter, forge and counterfeit an endorsement of a government check. On this count the defendant was acquitted.

Count 2 charged that the defendant uttered and published as true the check mentioned in Count 1. On this charge he was convicted. I am certain that on the testimony in this case, it being one of fact, the jury's verdict could well be sustained and I so state.

Analysis of Testimony

The government called one Peter Raiano as a witness, who testified substantially as follows:

He is employed by the Third Avenue Check Cashing Corporation located at 1202 Elder Avenue; has been so employed three years; he knows the defendant Josephus Etheridge (s.m. P 11-12)*; he identifies the defendant. He knew him since 1962-

* Indicates stenographer minutes

they went to Junior High School together. He also lived in the same housing project with the defendant. (s.m. P 12-13) On April 18, 1973 he saw the defendant in the Third Avenue Check Cashing premises. He was alone. At that time he wanted to cash a check. (s.m. P 13-14)

The witness asked the defendant for identification. The defendant produced a card with his picture from Albert Einstein hospital and a social security card. He then proceeded to fill out a card for their files, said card included the defendant's name and address. The defendant signed the card with the name, Delphine B. Rhodes. (s.m. p 20-22) He then cashed the check and gave the defendant money. Defendant took the money and left. (s.m. P 20-23)

On September 21, 1973 he again saw the defendant at 1202 Elder Avenue in the Bronx. At that time there was another employee present. He offered a check for me to cash. (s.m. p 25)

Government Exhibit 3 is the check that was offered. The check was payable to Delphine Rhodes. At that time he (witness) knew that the first check had been returned by the bank as a forgery. (s.m. p 26)

When Exhibit 3 was presented to him he made a phone call.

While on the phone he picked up a camera and set it on top of the counter-he took pictures of the check and the defendant while defendant was standing at the counter.

Government exhibits 4A-4B and 4E are the pictures just referred to; he recognizes the picture in said photograph to be that of the defendant. (s.m. P 28)

He then made another call and then told the defendant he could not cash the check until he got the okay from his supervisor. The defendant then turned around, leaving the check in the store, walked out, turned toward Westchester Avenue and ran.

Cross Examination

The witness reiterated that he saw the defendant write the name on Government's Exhibit I. (s.m. P 33) He further testified that he could not recall whether the endorsement on the check was already there or made in his presence. (s.m. P 34) He further testified that he recalls the incident that occurred on September 21st, 1973. The defendant did not receive any money on that day. (s.m. P 35)

Roy D. Nedrow, called as a witness by the Government testified substantially as follows:

He is a Special Agent with the United States Secret Service. He knows the defendant and identified him. (s.m. P 39) The witness identifies Government exhibit No. I as a certified photocopy of a government check.

On February 6, 1974 he saw the defendant at his office at 90 Church Street. The defendant came voluntarily; they had a conversation. (s.m. P 39-40) The conversation covered about two hours. At one time Special Agent Ronald Morosky was there; later Special Agent James Ryan was there. (s.m. P 41) Agent Nedrow informed the defendant that he was a government Agent conducting an investigation into a forgery of a government check. That it was a criminal investigation and then informed the defendant as to his Constitutional rights. (s.m. P 42) The defendant said he understood his rights read and then signed Government Exhibit 5; that is an advice of rights form which he handed to the defendant. Defendant said he understood it and wanted to sign it. Agent Morosky was present. (s.m. P 43) The defendant was then shown Exhibit 4A-(the photograph that was taken in the Check Cashing Store.) The defendant identified the photograph as his picture. (s.m. P 44)

They then had a question and answer period-which subsequently was reduced to writing and marked Government Exhibit 6 and the defendant signed said Exhibit. (s.m. P 47 to 48)

They had a further conversation which is transcribed in full as follows:

Q Tell us what the defendant said and tell us what you said?

MR. SOLOMON: May I have the date?

MR. SUSSMAN: February 6, 1974.

A He asked me if he could take another look at the check, the Delphine Rhodes check and I handed him the photocopy. He looked at it again and told me that he had made a mistake, that contrary to the oral statement he had given me earlier and contrary to his written statement, upon reflection he had decided that he had not signed the name Delphine Rhodes to the reverse of the check.

I asked him how this could have occurred, this error in his judgment and he said that he didn't really get a chance to look at the signature on the back of the check until that particular moment but now he was positive that he had not signed the name of Delphine Rhodes; that it was signed when he took it into the check cashers on Elder Avenue, but he hadn't actually done the signature.

Q Did there come a time thereafter on February 6, 1974, when the defendant was interviewed in your presence by an Assistant United States Attorney?

A Yes.

Q Will you please tell us what the Assistant United States Attorney said and what the defendant said during the course of that interview?

A The Assistant United States Attorney introduced himself to Mr. Etheridge. He advised him of his constitutional rights to remain silent. He advised him again that anything he said could be used against him. He was again advised of his right to have an attorney present and if he could not afford one, one would be appointed for him by the court and he was advised if he started a conversation, he could conclude it at any time he wished. There was no obligation for him to continue talking.

The United States Attorney asked him several questions regarding his background, of a biographical nature.

He was asked questions how he was treated by the agent, whether he was advised of his rights previous to coming to the attention of the U.S. Attorney and then asked him the story behind the Delphine Rhodes check.

Q Which Delphine Rhodes check, Exhibit 1?

A That is correct, the photostatic copy.

Q Go ahead.

A Mr. Etheride informed him how he had obtained the check, where he had obtained the check, where he had cashed the check and how he had gotten the identification for the check exactly as he told me during the oral conversation and during the conversation in which I was taking a statement.

He did, however, tell the United States Attorney he was not responsible for the forgery of the check as he had told me on the last discussion at our office prior to coming over to the courtroom. He told me that he had been in error when he talked to me -- he told the U.S. Attorney; that in fact he had not been responsible for signing the payee's name on the check when he had gone into the Third Avenue Check Cashers, the check had already been signed and he had not signed anything on the back of the check when he cashed it.

Q Agent Nedrow, did you have occasion in the course of your investigation to have a handwriting analysis done on a hearing that the defendant gave you samples of and the handwriting that appears on the back of the check? Was it reported to you that the examination by experts failed to provide an expert for identifying Josephus Etheridge as the writer of the endorsement on the check Exhibit 1?

A That was the report.

Q Did you also have a fingerprinting analysis done of Government's Exhibit 1?

A Yes

Q Was it reported to you by the experts that no latent prints suitable for identification purposes were developed on that check?

A Yes, that was the report.

Cross-Examination

The handwriting report as to Government Exhibit 1 was inconclusive. They could not say whether or not Mr. Etheridge was the author of the questioned writing.

This report came from the Secret Service handwriting laboratory in Washington, D.C. There was also a finger print analysis of Government Exhibit 1. (s.m. P 53) It was reported by the experts that no latent prints suitable for identification purposes were developed on that check. That was the report.

(s.m. P 52)

Defense

Josephus Etheridge called as a witness in his own behalf testified substantially as follows:

He was born in 1948. Attended Junior High School 125 in the Bronx; from there he went to James Monroe High School; he then attended junior college at West Point and Oklahoma Military Academy for one (1) year. He then transferred to Atlanta University, Clark College and there applied to Case Western Law School for admission. He works with the Youth Gangs in the Bronx. It is a State Program involved with the rehabilitation of youths in criminal activities. (s.m. P 65) He did not take Government Exhibit 1 into the check cashing agency and did not endorse the payee's name. (s.m. P 66-67) It is not his signature nor his handwiring. He did not write the payee's name that appears on Exhibit 1. (s.m. P 67) He further testified that he did not present Government Exhibit 3 on or about September 21, 1973 to the check cashing gentlemen for cashing purposes.

He did not endorse said check. Government Exhibit 6 is read by the defendant.

The defendant then testified that the statements he made in Government Exhibit 6 are not true. (s.m. P 71)

He further testified:

Q At the time that you made these statements, will you explain to this court and jury what the circumstances were surrounding the conversation between you and Mr. Nedrow and your answers?

A I would like to first relate the incident to the check in question of the picture which in reference to the check, the picture of me right there.

During the time that I could recall of my total recollection that that picture was taken, there were a group of us from the Bronx in there. The gentlemen who testified whose name is Pete, knows me. Everybody was in there cashing checks, girls, everything. While they were in there, a young lady happened to get into an argument with him, a dispute about a check. This is the best I can recollect how my picture got on there. She had left and when I approached there he asked me did I know her and I said yes, I did.

Q Are you referring to Government's Exhibit 2?

A I am referring to that one. He said he reached under and pulled up a camera and evidently he snapped the photo.

Time went on. After about nine months and I had never saw neither one of these checks before until I was left a card by an agent that I was supposed to appear.

I came down and I was first confronted with a picture of myself showing me and he said is that your picture and I said yes. The name on that check is Delphine R. Rhodes. He then showed me another government check asking me how many more did I cash and I am telling him I never seen either one of these and the questions he is putting to me and he is saying if you cooperate, you might be able to do what you are doing later on that evening.

While I am in there, I see he is not going to give me not slack either way, no leeway and he started plying questions to me. While he was asking me, that typewritten statement was construed in his ways. I knew if I didn't cooperate with them, I would be put and placed in jail and possible with a bail which I had no money. I did sign that statement. I made it up because that is the only way I figured to get out of there. I went to the U.S. Attorney, the same thing happened.

During the course of this time, I say to myself that Pete, why wait nine months to bring a case when he knew that wasn't me that passed that check. He knew that in order for that to be there, that a card had to be already on there with that signature and that is why it came back from Washington that my signature and everything doesn't match and he never took a photo of me because I was never in there with either one of those checks and that is why the girls I had, the total recall, it took him nine months to see. I am the one that has the picture and I might know her through him-

MR. SUSSMAN: Your Honor, this has gone on a very long time, this narrative and we would like to not object if we possibly can but at a point I have to make an objection.

THE COURT: I will allow it.

Have you finished your answer?

THE WITNESS: yes.

He further testified that he had a conversation in the Court house with an Assistant United States Attorney (s.m. P 74)

THE COURT: You recall having a conversation with some Assistant?

THE WITNESS: Yes

THE COURT: You don't know his name?

Q You recall that took place in this building?

A Yes.

Q And do you recall that that Assistant, whoever it was, I don't know myself, asked you certain questions and you gave him substantially the same type of answers that you gave to Mr. Nedrow?

A I did.

Q You also say that wasn't true?

A Yes.

Q But you continued that deception because of the reasons you explained?

A Yes.

Q Referring to Government's Exhibit 3. Were you in this check cashing agency on September 21, 1973?

A I was.

Q Were you standing in the line with other people?

A Yes, I was.

Q Will you explain to his Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, what occurred at the time that you were standing there in the line?

A The line was long. There were people getting paid and people was passing me checks. I know Petey because I cash my own checks there, my own name and he knows me through basketball. I am well known. He has to know me because we grew up together. He and the girl or lady was in a dispute. Being a counselor for youth gangs, I tried to intervene. He looked up and asked me if I knew her and I said I know her. She left stating like she was going to get ID which left it right there on the counter and I guess he figured, he might have figured she was in a group with me and my photo was taken. When it was shown to me, that is when I remembered that that must have been the only time that that incident happened, that occurred and that is how i got to the point about the handwriting and the card in there, there never was one, because they do have a policy in a check cashing place, if you don't have the proper identification, you sign it twice in front of him and if you do have it, you have to have a card in there anyway and if it is a woman's name, it would have male or female and what type of material was done on what transaction.

Looking at it logically, if one was in there, he must have done it because a government check the ID, no ID, you could make up and laminate and put your picture in there. It has to sufficient. It is not just enough you could present -- that is the only way and that is the way they put it that way. I might know and through me questions were asked and I said I did know, so I was pressured into this situation.

MR. SOLOMON: Your witness.

Cross-Examination

He did not go to law school. (s.m. P 78) He admits signing Government Exhibit 6. The statement was prepared in the manner testified to by Agent Nedrow. (s.m. P 83) He complained to Agent Nedrow that he, the Agent, was putting words in his mouth. He typed I never wrote anything. (s.m. P 86) He was interviewed by an Assistant United States Attorney. He was warned of his rights. He stated that he understood all of his rights. He then admitted in the statement that he cashed the check but denied that he signed it. (s.m. P 88)

That all this refers to Government Exhibit "6".

Q The statement you have in front of you, Exhibit 6, says you signed it and you cashed it, right?

A Yes.

Q But you decided you didn't sign it, you just cashed it, that is what you told him?

A He said it doesn't make a difference what you do, we are going to get you either one. That is what the U.S. Attorney said. You are not getting out of nothing. I started getting angry and I had no alternative.

He further testified he never signed Government Exhibit 1. He never cashed it on April 18th, 1973 or on any other day. He never signed Government Exhibit 2.

This concluded the cross-examination and the trial testimony.

Statement of Possible Legal Issues

Q. Was the evidence adduced at the trial by the Government sufficient to have been submitted for its consideration?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Court in its charge particularly explain to the Jury all of the elements essential that the Government must prove in order to establish his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Court explain to the Jury the difference between the two Counts and what the proof must be as to each.

A. Yes.

Charge to the Jury

No exception was taken to the charge or any part thereof. (s.m. P 130)

Court's Comment

"Well, they didn't believe you, Mr. Etheridge, and they were unanimously convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that you were guilty."

"I think I ought to tell you man to man, for what it is worth, that I didn't believe you either, and I would have convicted you too!"

...Now, I don't really have to retry that because that is the jury's business, but I will tell you that I may well be influenced by my belief that you were lying when you were on the witness stand and that you are not being honest with the Court now." (s.m. P 138)

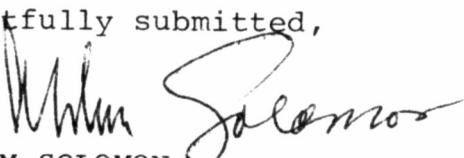

CONCLUSION

In the context of all the evidence, I have come to the conclusion that there is no non-frivolous issue or issues herein to be raised before this Court.

This brief is filed pursuant to the decision in Anders
v California, 386 U.S. 738 - which decision I have carefully read and believe that it applies herein.

2 CHARGE OF THE COURT

3 (Frankel, J.)

4 THE COURT: Members of the jury, you have
5 heard the evidence and you have heard the opposing views
6 about what you should find from the evidence. This has 7 been a short trial as trials go in this courthouse, but 8 I don't think I need to dwell at length for you on the fact
9 that it is an important trial. All trials are important.
10 Perhaps criminal trials more than others. It is important
11 to the defendant, obviously, it is important to the prosecu-
12 tion, the government, it is important to you and to me and 13 our respective responsibilities representing the public
14 interest in the administration of justice.

15 Yours is the critical task we have all told you
16 yesterday and today. We told you that because it is true.
17 You are to seek the truth without fear, without favor,
18 without prejudice, without bias as you promised when you
19 came to be selected for this service yesterday.

20 My responsibility is relatively minor but 21 essentially in the case, I am to give you the few rules of 22 law that govern this proceeding and govern your deliberations.
23 Remember, when you go to deliberate, it is the evidence
24 that will be your concern and the inferences to be drawn
25 from that evidence as to whether this case has or has not

2 been proved with respect to either count.

3 When you go to the jury room, you will have with 4 you a copy of the indictment for your convenience. Remember,
5 it is not evidence.

6 You will also have with you the exhibits. They 7 are part of the evidence and you will consider them as 8 such. And you will have, I trust, your fresh collective 9 recollection of the sworn testimony from the three witnesses
10 you have heard and that is, of course, vital and central 11 evidence in the case.

12 One of the exhibits is a stipulation, a statement 13 of certain agreed facts and of course you may take those 14 undisputed facts as part of the materials you consider 15 in seeking to arrive at your verdict.

16 Mr. Etheridge in response to the indictment against 17 him has pled not guilty. That means that the government
18 here as you have heard has undertaken to prove his guilt
19 beyond a reasonable doubt and you may not convict on 20 either count unless that heavy burden has been sustained.
21 It is a corollary, that this defendant, any defendant as 22 I mentioned to you yesterday and repeat today, comes here
23 armed with the presumption of innocence. That presumption 24 will stay in his favor after those instructions and 25 when you go to the jury room. It will be enough in itself

2 to require you to acquit unless or until you are convinced
3 beyond a reasonable doubt that the evidence proves him
4 guilty.

5 As some of you have lately heard and all jurors
6 must hear each time in a criminal case some words of in-
7 struction about the meaning of the basic proposition in 8 our criminal law, the requirement of proof beyond a reason-
9 able doubt. We mean by that concept, first of all what 10 the words literally seek to convey. Proof beyond a doubt
11 that is based on reason. Reason applied to the evidence
12 or lack of evidence in the case before you.

13 We mean a doubt that has substance and that 14 is not merely shadowy. We mean a doubt that takes its 15 origin in your judgment, your collective experience and 16 wisdom and common sense all applied as you deliberate
17 together on the record of evidence before you. It is not 18 a basis for an extending of sympathy to anyone. It is not 19 a device or pretext for avoiding performance of an un-
20 pleasant duty. A reasonable doubt is the kind of doubt 21 that would cause a prudent person to hesitate before taking 22 action in some matter of importance to himself or herself.

23 If you had such a serious matter to decide,
24 and if you proceed coolly and objectively to review all 25 the facts and all the factors that had a bearing on that

2 decision, and if at the end of that kind of rational
3 review you found yourself beset by uncertainty and unsure
4 of your judgment, you would have what we try to identify 5 here as a reasonable doubt and the converse of that is also 6 true. If you had such a decision to make and you engaged 7 in such a review of the pertinent considerations and if 8 at the end of that you were not beset by uncertainty
9 and unsure of your judgment, you would not have a reasonable 10 doubt.

11 When we speak of the requirement of proof
12 beyond a reasonable doubt we don't mean proof beyond any 13 doubt whatsoever or proof to a mathematical certainty.
14 If that were meant, nobody could ever be convicted in 15 a criminal trial, and that is because it is in the nature
16 of questions about matters of fact and I think most clearly
17 logical, it makes no difference about matters of fact 18 that lie in the past, that they are not capable when they 19 are disputed of proof beyond any possible doubt or proof
20 to a mathematical certainty.

21 So we don't mean that when we speak of proof
22 beyond a reasonable doubt. At the same time, what we do
23 mean is that in a criminal case in our system, the burden
24 of proof upon the prosecution is a very high one and that 25 you may convict only if your minds in the end are free

1 rkh

119

2 of the kind of uncertainty or reservation I have tried to 3 describe to you.

4 With those basic principles in view, let's turn
5 to the charges in this case against the defendant and 6 the issues they present for your determination. All 7 criminal cases in the federal court rest upon alleged 8 violations of statutes, enactments of the Congress and 9 no one need memorize of these statutes, but it may be 10 helpful to you as background if I mention to you briefly
11 the statutory provisions involved in this case.

12 The two counts, the two accusations against 13 Mr. Etheridge rest upon different provisions of a section 14 of our Criminal Code, Section 495 and I will read you the 15 pertinent parts thereof.

16 As for count 1, which for shorthand I may call
17 for the moment the forgery count. The relevant statutory 18 language is this. The statute says: "Whoever falsely
19 forges any writing for the purpose of obtaining or receiving 20 from the United States any sum of money is guilty of 21 a crime."

22 Then there is count 2 of the indictment, the 23 so-called uttering or publishing count and here the 24 statutory language I will quote to you is this:

25 "Whoever utters or publishes as true any such

1 rk

120

2 forged writing with intent to defraud the United States
3 knowing the same to be forged, commits a crime."

4 As I say, count 1 rests on the first bit of 5 statutory language I read to you. Count 2 rests on 6 the second.

7 As you know, the first count which you have 8 before you and it is full of language, charges that on or 9 about April 18, 1973, the defendant wilfully and knowingly
10 falsely forged the Treasury check payable to Delphine
11 R. Rhodes for the purpose of obtaining a sum of money
12 from the United States; that check being at that time
13 a genuine obligation of the United States.

14 In order to convict on this count, the government
15 must have established beyond a reasonable doubt each and 16 every one of four essential elements, not all of them
17 strictly speaking list issues for your decision but we 18 will list them all along the way and the points at which 19 the real dispute centers, the problems that are left 20 for you to resolve. These four essential elements are 21 as follows:

22 First, that the check which is the subject
23 of the indictment and a photo of which will appear on your 24 copy of the indictment, was a genuine obligation of the 25 United States. That is stipulated, so that element is not

1 rkh

121

2 a great concern of yours.

3 Second, that on or about April 18, 1973, the 4 defendant endorsed the check by writing the name of the 5 payee Delphine R. Rhodes on the back of the check.

6 That as you know is the heart of the matter.

7 The heart of the dispute with respect to count 1. Paragraph
8 3, that the endorsement was a forgery, and I think if you
9 were to find affirmatively on 2, it would quite clearly
10 follow that 3 is established in that it is stipulated
11 that Delphine R. Rhodes didn't sign the check and didn't 12 authorize to sign it including the defendant.

13 4, that the defendant acted knowingly and
14 wilfully and intended to defraud the United States.

15 Elaborating very briefly on those elements
16 insofar as it is necessary to elaborate it, let me simply 17 state to you that under the law, probably familiar to all 18 of you, a person who signs another's name on a check where 19 that other is the payee of the check, commits forgery
20 unless he has the authority of that payee to sign. That 21 is not where the basic problem lies. There really is no 22 contention that anybody authorized the signing. The 23 question is, as you know, did the defendant affix that 24 signature falsely to the back of that check. If he did,
25 the government is also required to establish that in so

2 doing, he acted knowingly and wilfully. Now, those words
3 are in the statute as I read to you and they are in the 4 indictment. They refer to the essential element of criminal
5 intent. They describe the kind of criminal intent necessary 6 in a case of this nature, so they are critical, but they 7 are not very technical and they are not abstruse or 8 difficult in their application to this case.

9 We say that somebody acts knowingly and 10 wilfully in the sense that concerns us here if the person
11 acts voluntarily, purposely. Conscious of what he is doing 12 and intending to do just that. He acts knowingly and 13 wilfully if in addition he acts with a bad or evil purpose, 14 and that means not that he is necessarily required to 15 know the words of any statute that he may be violating,
16 but that he must have an awareness that what he is doing
17 is wrongful and contrary to his obligations under the 18 criminal law. That is the kind of state of mind, in other 19 words, with which an alleged forgery of this kind must be 20 committed before a defendant may be convicted.

21 As I say, this subject of wilfulness and 22 knowledge refers to a state of mind and state of 23 mind, though it is a fact, it is not a fact
24 that commonly can be got at by so-called direct evidence.
25 You can't look at or otherwise experience with our senses

2 somebody's state of mind. Therefore, whether it is for 3 purposes of legal proceedings or other kinds of decisions
4 that we need to make, when we are interested in getting 5 at the state of someone's mind, his intentions, his motives,
6 his beliefs, his knowledge or awareness, we are entitled 7 to consider so-called circumstantial evidence. We consider
8 the person and whatever we know about him. We consider 9 the degree of his intelligence, education, awareness,
10 alertness. We consider all the surrounding circumstances
11 and from all of that circumstantial evidence we learn
12 inferences about what the person knew, believed, intended,
13 and you will do that here in connection with your considera-
14 tion of the question whether if the defendant did forget
15 that check, he did so knowingly and wilfully.

16 Then we have count 2. Relating to the same
17 check, count 2 charges an unlawful uttering and publishing
18 or an attempt to pass and cash that particular check.

19 Here again we define the requirements of proof
20 in terms of four essential elements and again I will read
21 them to you and simply remind you in the course of talking 22 about them, what you already know, I am sure, is your 23 basic concern in trying to decide this case.

24 The four elements, first, again that the check
25 was a genuine obligation of the United States. Again, a

1 rk

ONLY COPY AVAILABLE 124

2 matter not in dispute.

3 Second, that the endorsement Delphine R. Rhodes
4 on the back of the check was a forgery. Whether it
5 was the defendant or someone else who wrote it.

6 In this second count, as you realized from 7 the argument of counsel, it is not essential to have proved 8 that the defendant wrote the name of that payee on the 9 back of the check, but it is essential for the government
10 to have established beyond a reasonable doubt that it was a 11 forgery, that it was the unauthorized writing of someone 12 other than the payee falsely signing her name.

13 The third essential element is that on or about 14 April 18, 1973, the defendant offered the check to someone 15 else, cash it, knowing that the endorsement was a forgery,
16 and the fourth, somewhat overlapping the third, is the re-
17 quirement of proof that the defendant acted knowingly and 18 wilfully, and intended to defraud the United States.

19 Let me just say about this, that here the heart
20 of the matter would appear to be knowledge by the defendant
21 that the check was endorsed falsely by, and that it was 22 forged endorsement.

23 An attempt by the defendant notwithstanding 24 that knowledge to cash the check and, again, in all of 25 this conduct, the state of mind I have talked about, action

2 taken knowingly and wilfully.

3 Again you have just heard the arguments
4 and you know where they direct your attention. The key issue
5 may be, did the defendant in fact present that check at 6 that place in the Bronx at that check cashing agency on 7 or about April 18, 1973. If he did, did he know that 8 the endorsement was a forgery, whether he made it or somebody
9 else, and embracing that, essentially, did he act knowingly
10 and wilfully in taking those steps on that occasion.

11 Now, in both of the statements of the elements
12 of these two crimes, I have stated to you that the person
13 charged in order to be acquitted must be shown to have had 14 an intent to defraud the United States. I instruct you
15 that this does not necessarily require an intent to cause
16 pecuniary loss to the United States. The government isn't 17 required to prove that it was intended to cause the government
18 to lose money in the ultimate results of this conduct.
19 It is required that the prosecution prove that the unlawful 20 activity must have been a kind that would impair the 21 functioning of the government in the administration of 22 its business and here the allegation in this regard is 23 that the intended effect of this kind of conduct, forging
24 or uttering or publishing, would be to impair the functioning 25 of the government in the disbursement of funds for the

2 payment of due and just obligations of the government
3 to some person, some citizen or other.

4 Now, you may well conclude or you may well
5 have concluded already, that the essence of your task as 6 is common with jury assignments, is to resolve questions
7 of credibility. You have heard just three witnesses. The 8 net result of their testimony under oath is that you have 9 flatly contradictory stories about what actually happened
10 on April 18th, to say nothing of what happened later on 11 on February 6th of this year when the defendant was 12 interviewed first by a Secret Service agent and later by 13 an Assistant United States Attorney.

14 You are going to be called upon to resolve those 15 conflicts in deciding whether or not the government has 16 sustained its purpose on either of the counts placed before 17 you.

18 That is what we mean when we say for shorthand,
19 we must decide questions of credibility.

20 That is not a technical assignment, technical 21 in the sense of especially confided to the expertise of lawyers
22 or judges. It is a premise of our system of legal procedure
23 that legal people are not necessarily particularly qualified
24 or uniquely qualified to resolve questions of credibility.
25 That is the premise on which we call to the courthouse people

1 rkh

127

2 like yourselves who are laymen so far as the law is concerned
3 to decide such key issues.

4 The expectation is that you will bring with you
5 to this task your experience in the world and of people,
6 your experience in deciding for one kind of purpose or 7 another the kind of people you can rely on and which 8 stories you will believe when you are considering serious
9 questions and when you must make serious decisions about 10 whom to believe. You engage in the same kind of analysis 11 and study here. You want to consider the witnesses who 12 testify and consider how they impressed you. Did the 13 witness appear to be candid and forthright, open? Did he 14 seem to know what he was talking about, and if he seemed 15 to know what he was talking about, very importantly,
16 did he seem to you to have intention to tell you accurately
17 what he knew. Were there contradictions of any kind 18 and if there were, how important were they.

19 Compare the direct examination with the cross
20 examination. Consider as it has been suggested you should 21 and as you probably would in any event, the interests
22 and motives of the several witnesses. Law enforcement 23 people may have an interest in the accounts they give 24 of events on the witness stand. A defendant has an 25 obvious interest in the account that he or she may give of

2 the facts giving rise to the prosecution.

3 I mentioned to you that you would wish to 4 consider such things as interest and motive. Obviously the 5 fact that somebody is interested in the outcome doesn't 6 mean he is lying. If that were the case, we wouldn't let 7 interested people testify. I mention this subject along
8 with others simply as a reminder of the kinds of factors
9 you will undoubtedly want to take into account in appraising
10 the testimony and deciding the core problems of credibility.

11 We have told you over and over again that you
12 are the sovereign judges of the facts. That means among 13 other things, that if you find any witness has wilfully
14 lied to you, it is within your exclusive judgment to decide 15 whether you will reject all of his testimony or you may in 16 that exclusive judgment, use such parts of the testimony
17 as you find are believable and useful in your reconstruction
18 of the events in your ascertainment of the truth.

19 When you do these things, when you undertake 20 to resolve these issues, there will be 12 of you in the 21 jury room and that has certain clear and obvious differences.
22 It means that each of you will feel entitled and obliged 23 to contribute your own thinking, your own wisdom to this 24 joint effort at decision. It means, by the same token,
25 that each of you will go to the jury room, prepared to listen

2 with attention and patience and courtesy to the views of 3 your fellow jurors. If you have an opinion at some stage
4 of the deliberations, and it later appears to you that 5 it is wrong, you won't hesitate to change it in the exercise
6 of a rational and honest judgment.

7 At the same time, if you have an opinion and 8 it does reflect your honest judgment, you won't feel
9 obliged to even permit it to change it just because you
10 happen to be outvoted at any particular time.

11 I think you know that in order to reach a verdict
12 either way on either count, you must be unanimous, but 13 the unanimous verdict of a jury must represent in the 14 end the individual judgment and conscience of each member
15 of that jury.

16 If while you are deliberating you have any 17 problems, you need to hear any of the testimony or hear 18 any repetition of these relatively brief instructions or 19 if you have any other problems, send us a note through 20 your forelady and we will undertake to assist you in 21 whatever way we can.

22 If you are sending a note at any time and you
23 happen at that point to be divided in your vote, don't 24 tell us what the division is. That is a private matter
25 for the jury and we are not to intrude on that.

2 There are two counts. If and when you reach
3 a verdict you will be asked separately to state it on 4 each of those counts. If you were to reach a verdict on 5 one and not the other and you wish to report that one,
6 you may let us know that and you may do that.

7 The practice in this court normally is to have 8 verdicts delivered orally and not in writing so when you
9 have a verdict, let us know and we will then take it
10 orally from your forelady.

11 Before I excuse our alternates, let me inquire,
12 are there exceptions, gentlemen?

13 MR. SUSSMAN: The government has no exceptions.

14 MR. SOLOMON: None.

15 THE COURT: In that case, since the 12 jurors
16 first selected have survived so well, Mr. Weinflash 17 and Mr. Watt, it comes time for me to excuse you and I will 18 not excuse you with a long speech except to thank you for 19 your service in this case.

20 Now if we may have the marshals sworn.

21 (Marshals sworn)

22 THE COURT: All right, ladies and gentlemen,
23 if you will proceed with the marshals to the jury room.

24 (At 12:20 P.M. the jury commenced deliberations.)

Court's Comment

"Well, they didn't believe you, Mr. Etheridge and they were unanimously convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that you were guilty."

"I think I ought to tell you man to man, for what it is worth, that I didn't believe you either, and I would have convicted you too."

..."Now, I don't really have to retry that because that is the jury's business, but I will tell you that I may well be influenced by my belief that you were lying, when you were on the witness stand and that you are not being honest with the Court now."
